It must once more be remembered that: the remedy which has been successful in a case, may not infallibly cure in all possible cases. Hence the necessity of indicating, not only one, but a series of medicines for each disease. III. It is always understood that to practise electro-homoeopathy it is necessary to become thoroughly versed in the preceding principles and rules; afterwards, the catalogue may be consulted with advantage, and, in it, ever one can discern the treatment suitable to each individual case. IV. With the exception of particular cases, clearly defined, in which individual judgment I can recommend some variations, the treatment should always be commenced with the first remedy indicated in the catalogue. When experience (which may last some minutes or days) has proved that the first remedy is not sufficient, recourse must be had to following ones. V. The diseases, here reported, have been cured by my remedies; but I report neither the number of cases, nor the different forms, nor the age, name, and rank of persons treated at Bologna, Rome, Rochetta and in foreign countries. All these details can be found in my pamphlet: Un poco di storia sui rimedii Mattel. VI. For the method of preparing the dilutions, baths compresses, unctions, gargles, either with the globules or with the vegetable electricities, refer to chapter V, for the electricities and chapter VII for the globules. Finally, for sake of brevity, I adopt some...
