Passenger Car Repairs It is common practice to pass all passenger equipment through the general repair shop at stated intervals, when it is placed in first-class condition, the light running repairs being attended to between such periods at the coach yards. On roads paying particular attention to passenger traffic the cars are overhauled about once a year; on others the periods may be from two to two and one-half years. The factors entering into the cost of such repairs are car mileage and the proportion of the several kinds of passenger equipment, as baggage, day coach, chair, dining, etc. It evidently requires less expenditure to keep baggage and mail cars in serviceable condition than the highly finished upholstered coaches. Freight Car Repairs The factors entering into this cost are car mileage, the proportion of cars of different capacities and...
