Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.This is a look at American history dating back to the time of the Revolution. From the intro: THE AMERICAN war had been for five years in progress; for two years a treaty of alliance, having as sole object to maintain effectually the liberty, sovereignty, and independence, absolute and unlimited, of the United States, bound us French to the insurgents ; successes and reverses followed each other in turn: Brooklyn, Trenton, Brandywine, Saratoga. Quite recently the news had come of the double victory at sea and on land of d Estaing at Grenada, and Paris had been illuminated. The lights were scarcely out when news arrived of the disaster of the same d Estaing at Savannah. All France felt anxious concerning the issue of a war which had lasted so long and whose end continued to be doubtful. When, in the first months of 1780, the report went about that a great definitive effort was to be attempted, that it was not this time a question of sending ships to the Americans, but of sending an army, and that the termination of the great drama was near, the enthusiasm was unbounded. All wanted to take part. There was a prospect of crossing the seas, of succoring a people fighting for a sacred cause, a people of whom all our volunteers praised the virtues; the people led by Washington, and represented in Paris by Franklin. An ardor as of crusaders inflamed the hearts of French youths, and the intended expedition was, in fact, the most important that France had launched beyond the seas since the distant time of the crusades. The cause was a truly sacred one, the cause...
